

I am responsible

This video is a dramatic scenario used to encourage taking responsibility for online behaviour. It features three teenage males and a teenage female, all played by actors. The female and one male are standing together talking at night in a skateboard park.

They overhear two males arguing.

The female pulls out her phone and starts to film the argument which turns physical.

The two males push and shove one another. One male knocks the hat off the other's head. They fight and wrestle each other to the ground, continuing to throw punches.

The female continues to film the fight with her phone and smiles with enjoyment. The male standing with her looks concerned.

The female shows the male her phone screen recording the men fighting.

The male looks over from the phone to the two other males. He drops his skateboard and rushes over to break up the fight.

He steps in and stops the fight. Text appears "I am responsible."

Logo shows the Australian coat of arms above the words Australian Government, and Office of the Children's eSafety Commissioner with the web address esafety.gov.au

esafety.gov.au/youngandesafe